PHIL 365 - Environmental Ethics: Our ecosystems are in a state of serious decay. Anthropogenic disturbance has seemingly thrown off nature's balance. But what are we to make of this? Is human interaction with nature fundamentally different in kind than animal or weather system interaction with nature? Being moral animals, shackled by the burden of morality, how ought we to behave given the state of nature and the implications and far reaching scale of human interaction with ecosystems? We will endeavor to engage with all of these questions. But wait there's more—do we have obligations to animals, future generations, ecosystems, rivers, rocks?
