

Melissa Anderson Receives Kirschstein Fellowship

NEIU McNair Scholar Melissa Anderson received the Ruth L. Kirschstein National Research Service Award. This $85,000 award is an Individual Predoctoral Fellowship to Promote Diversity in Health-Related Research from the Department of Health and Human Services, National Institutes of Health (NIH), National Cancer Institute.

Melissa, who studies Microbiology, Immunology & Infectious Diseases at the University of Virginia, received the award for her research that characterizes the function of a specific gammaherpes virus protein in the virus life cycle.

Between four and six of these awards are presented each year in honor of Dr. Ruth L. Kirschstein, the first woman director of an NIH institute. In 2002 Congress renamed the National Research Award for Kirschstein.

McNair Scholars in Niagara Falls

McNair staff members and Scholars from cohorts 7, 8 and 9 attended the 2010 University at Buffalo McNair Research Conference July 15th-18th at Niagara Falls, New York. Angela Howard, Psychology major, presented her research Gender Priming and Leadership Emergence in Teams: A "Dead End" in the Labyrinth of Women's Leadership, mentored by Dr. Amanda Dykema-Engblade.

In addition to research and poster presentations, this event offered professional and student workshops on funding opportunities, reasons to pursue graduate education, and a graduate school fair. This three day conference included keynote speakers McNair Alumnus Dr. Folarin Erogbogbo and Dr. Esther Takeuchi of the University of Buffalo, and Dr. Mark Anthony Neal of Drake University.

Conference attendees enjoyed a boat tour of the falls on the "Maid of the Mist" and a trolley tour of the State Park, both of which allowed the McNair group to enjoy the natural beauty of Niagara Falls.

Graduate School Visits

As part of the McNair Summer Research experience, Scholars visited graduate programs at the University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC), Loyola University, Northwestern University and the University of Alabama.

On June 18th at UIC, Recruitment Coordinator Francisco Piña and Summer Research Opportunity Coordinator Allen Bryson presented information regarding application to UIC programs. NEIU McNair alumnus Keith Atterberry, Ph.D. student in Criminal Justice and Nereida Salas, Ph.D. student in Political Science, along with other UIC Ph.D. students, provided a panel discussion.

The Scholars visited Loyola University's Graduate School Monday, July 22 where they were greeted by Marcela Gallegos, the Graduate School's Events and Outreach Coordinator, Associate Dean Dr. Patricia Mooney-Melvin, Assistant Dean Dr. Jessica Horowitz and Ann Bezbatchesenko, Director of Graduate and Professional Enrollment Management. The Scholars also met with faculty from academic departments of their interests and enjoyed lunch and closing remarks with Ms. Gallegos and Associate Dean, Student Diversity and Multicultural Affairs, Javier Cervantes. Peter Kotoski, Ph.D. student in History, was also present to offer a student perspective.

Victoria Neiman, cohort 8, was among the 150 Psychology students who were invited to visit Northwestern University last June. She met with Dr. Richard Zinbarg and Dr. Susan J. Hespos.

On September 16th, Victoria and Resney Gugwor were accompanied by Academic Skills Specialist Alejandra Prieto-Mendoza for a visit to the University of Alabama. That visitation program offered a campus tour and lunch with students from ten other universities, as well as a series of individual meetings with faculty members. In the afternoon, the Scholars attended the presentation The Benefits of Investing in Graduate Education, and the seminar General Testing Strategies. Lastly, the Scholars took a practice GRE test to conclude this graduate school visit.

Scholar Salvador Montes was invited to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) by the CONVERGE program, after winning an academic contest with over 300 applicants (only 27 were invited). The CONVERGE program is designed to increase the presence of under-represented groups in MIT graduate programs. The program included tours of the Boston and Cambridge areas and information on graduate student life.

Salvador had the opportunity to meet the world renowned professor Eran Ben Joseph and Professor James Wescoat.

Victoria Neiman and Resney Gugwor at the Denny Chimes bell tower University of Alabama.

Application Retreat

Cohort 8 Scholars attended the first NEIU McNair Application Retreat organized by Academic Skills Specialist Alejandra Prieto-Mendoza. This retreat featured a series of sessions that targeted graduate application steps such as searching for schools, letters of recommendation, and admission essays. The Scholars learned about application requirements by working on their own applications. As one of the Scholars commented on the retreat evaluation, "This retreat made me aware of the amount of hard work that has to be invested in order to be better prepared!"

The retreat was held at the Q Center in St. Charles and will be offered again next summer.

Hispanic Heritage Month Panel

The panel Anticipating Latinos' Contribution to Knowledge in their Disciplines was presented by Scholars Pearl Martinez (Bilingual Bicultural Education) and Salvador Montes (Geography) from cohort 8 as well as Juan Ibarra (History) from cohort 7. Academic Skills Specialist Alejandra Prieto-Mendoza organized the event which was moderated by Program Director Kim Sanborn as part of the Hispanic Heritage Month activities.

This panel discussed Latino students' perspectives of the issues that their academic fields face, the level of Latino scholarship in academia, and how their academic fields have benefited from Latino contributions. Dr. Sanborn said of the event, "The Scholars' insights and observations made this a fascinating discussion about issues important to all of us."

Graduate Programs for Recent Grads

McNair graduates from the past academic year began their graduate studies this fall. The Scholars and their programs are:

Norman Davis

Norman currently attends Roosevelt University in Chicago, Illinois where he is working towards his Master of Arts in Sociology. He was awarded the Diversifying Higher Education Fellowship, which covers tuition and fees plus a monthly stipend.

TRIO NEWS

Funding for 200 Upward Bound projects are in jeopardy as the end of the fiscal year 2010 comes to a close. Members of Congress are working hard to pass a temporary spending bill known as the "Continuing Resolution" to keep government running after September 30th. Many in Washington believe that the November elections will endanger future funding for TRIO programs. In the fiscal year 2011 budget, the Obama administration proposed level funding for TRIO programs; however, the funding in that proposal does not extend to 200 Upward Bound projects. Upward Bound, as part of the TRIO programs, prepares college bound students from lower income families to transition successfully to college through scholastic projects and programs. Research shows that more than 90% of upward bound graduates go on to post secondary education and are four times more likely to earn a college degrees than other students with similar backgrounds. It is critical that funding for these projects be made available to ensure the success of students from disadvantaged backgrounds. The Council for Opportunity in Education (COE) is calling on TRIO supporters to lobby their Senators and local Representatives in support of funding for the program.
